

WORK UNDONE IS VERY LARGE

Only Four Hundred and Seventy-Five Bills To Become Laws This Year.

NEED MORE MONEY

Taxes Must Be Increased to Keep Pace with the Appropriations Recently Made.

(Special to The Gazette.) Madison, Wis., May 23.—Numerical work done by the legislature has been greater than the work done. Of the total of 1,100 bills introduced in both houses, about 475 will become laws. Considerable more than half were killed on the floor of the two houses, 24 were withdrawn, 15 died in committee and about 20 were vetoed by the governor.

Railway Taxation
The change in the method of taxing railroads from the license fee to the ad valorem system is expected to increase the revenues of the state anywhere from $500,000 to $1,000,000 annually and of this $200,000 is to go to the school fund, which will have a total of a little more than $1,000,000. Another source of revenue will be from the lumber districts, where it has been almost impossible to collect the tax on logs and lumber.

Lumber Tax
The new law provides for the taxing of the lumber against the owner of the land or his agent and giving him a lien on the lumber for the tax, thus protecting him against any disposition upon the part of the owner of the lumber not to pay, and making it practically impossible for him to escape. It is expected that many thousands of dollars will be derived annually from this source. A large revenue is also expected from the inheritance tax law, which is so drawn as to overcome the objections made by the supreme court to the law passed two years ago.

More Funds Necessary
And when the money spent, or authorized to be spent, by the legislature is taken into consideration, it will be seen that larger revenues are needed. Altogether the appropriation bills passed at this session foot up $2,310,594.90, which is $555,331.88 more than was spent by the legislature two years ago. The largest item is for the state charitable and penal institutions, $995,000, which is for the coming two years.

St. Louis Fair
The St. Louis fair commission is given $75,000, and $40,000 is set aside for installing the ad valorem system of railroad taxation. The home for feeble-minded at Chippewa Falls gets a special appropriation of $20,000, and the home for veterans at Waupaca is given $17,000 for improvements.

The University
The university appropriations amount to $221,000. The Industrial School for Girls at Milwaukee is given $16,000; $200,000 goes to the common school fund, and $10,000 is given county schools of agriculture. The national guard receives an increase of $5,000, the university stock farm $10,000, the geological survey, $10,000. The Plattville normal school gets $35,000 for an improvement to its building, $10,000 goes for stationery for the state, and $5,000 for blue books, while there are a number of small appropriations.

REFUSES TO MUZZLE THE PRESS

Kansas Judge Upholds Newspapers in Publishing Evidence.

Emporia, Kas., May 23.—In the district court here Judge Madden refused to grant a request made by Judge Thompson, counsel for the plaintiff in a note case, to restrain newspapers from reporting the evidence and allegations in the case before it should go to the jury. In refusing to grant the order Judge Madden said: "I will not give an order muzzling the press." He then proceeded to deliver a strong speech upholding the press.

New developments in the controversy between Capt. Hilde of the north side fire station at Manitowish, and Chief Duono over the laying of hose at a recent fire there were sprung Friday, when Hilde tendered his resignation. This is the end of a long standing rivalry. Appleton relatives of Mrs. Mark H. Richard, who died in Chicago last Tuesday, refused to accept the certificate of the coroner of Cook county and a post mortem was held, at which the cause of death was found to be, as stated in the coroner's certificate, peritonitis.

SOUTHERN VETERANS HOLD GREAT PARADE

Ten Thousand Men Who Fought for the Confederacy Respond to the Bugler's Call.

New Orleans, La., May 23.—To New Orleans was revealed Friday what no man has seen for two score years or more. For a few brief hours she held close to her heart the incarnate spirit of the Confederacy, and for her it lived and breathed again.

The hour set for the great parade of veterans was 3 o'clock. For an hour previous to that time Canal street, upon which the head of the line of march was formed, was a jumble of that defunct language. When the bugler's shrill notes sounded "Forward, march," there was a surge of the ranks, and up St. Charles street, the column, heading 10,000 men, turned, passing under the eyes of General Gordon, too ill to take part in the parade, and marched away toward the Lee monument. At the head of the column was General J. B. Levert of New Orleans, the chief marshal, with his numerous staff. Mrs. Stonewall Jackson, Mrs. E. Kirby-Smith, Mrs. Braxton Bragg, Mrs. Thomas J. Semmes, and Mrs. John H. Reagan were in the parade.

At the head of the veterans rode General C. I. Walker, commanding the Department of the Army of Northern Virginia. General S. D. Lee of the Army of the Tennessee Department rode with his staff just behind a carriage containing Major Capleville, General A. P. Stewart and General Joseph Wheeler. Following General Lee were the divisions of his department. General Cabell of the Mississippi department headed the last division of the old soldiers.

FOUND AT LAST

Nine Members of a Gang That Have Existed for Years, Are Arrested.

SET MANY FIRES

Hundreds of Places Are Now Thought To Have Burned by Their Orders.

(Special by Scripps-Melroe.) Toledo, Ohio, May 23.—For the past twenty-five years it has been known to the police that a gang of firebugs existed in the city but all efforts to discover them has been unavailing until yesterday when one was caught.

Arrest Nine Members
Through the one man arrested eight others were discovered by his confession and are now securely locked up to await trial. By this it is thought that the gang has been broken up for good and the rest have left the city.

Long Existence
The gang has had a long existence dating back twenty-five years. A careful estimate makes the total number of fires set in the neighborhood of five hundred and hundreds of thousands of dollars have been burned up.

CUBAN TREATY GOES TO SENATE

INCLUDES PLATT AMENDMENT

Under the Provisions of the Document the Island Republic Is Not to Enter into Any Compact Which Might Destroy Its Independence.

Havana, May 23.—The permanent treaty between the United States and Cuba, including the terms of the Platt amendment, was signed at the Cuban foreign office by Mr. Squiers, the American minister, and Secretary of State Zaldo, the latter having been especially appointed plenipotentiary for the purpose. The treaty contains a few insignificant changes from the draft submitted by the United States. Among those present at the time of the signing of the treaty were President Palma, Senor Hevia, assistant secretary of state; J. Sleeper, H. P. Fletcher, secretaries of the American legation, and O. C. Bizzard, clerk of the legation. The treaty now goes to the senate for ratification.

Provisions of the Pact.
Minister Squiers has been at work for several months in the negotiations with the Cuban government. The Platt amendment, which is a part of the treaty, is included word for word. Its incorporation into the form of a treaty is in accordance with provision 8 of the amendment, which specified by way of further assurance the government of Cuba will embody the foregoing provisions into a permanent treaty with the United States. These provisions succinctly stated are as follows:

Cuba is never to enter any treaty or other compact with any foreign power which will impair or tend to impair its independence.

Regarding Public Debt.
The government is not to assume nor contract any public debt, to pay the interest upon which and to make reasonable sinking fund provision for the ultimate payment or delivery of which, the revenue of the island, after paying the government expenses, shall be inadequate.

Cuba consents that the United States may intervene for the preservation of Cuban independence. Cuba ratifies all acts of the United States in Cuba done during the military occupation.

Cuba will make provision for the sanitation of the cities of the island to the end that a recurrence of epidemic and infectious diseases may be prevented.

Coaling Stations.
While the permanent treaty mentioned by Minister Squiers contains the provisions of the Platt amendment regarding the Isle of Pines, the acquisition of coaling stations by the United States, the final settlement of these questions, which will involve the ownership of the Isle of Pines, and the specific location of the coaling station, will be made the subject of a special treaty or treaties between the United States and Cuba.

Interviews with a number of senators indicate there is an inclination to oppose the ratification of the permanent and naval station treaty.

Sanguinely Is Opposed.
Senator Sanguilly, the most active opponent of the treaties with the United States, said he would oppose the permanent treaty because, under it, the United States, being the stronger power, could itself decide when intervention was desirable, regardless of the wishes of Cuba.

Other senators say that the paragraph relating to the Isle of Pines should have been eliminated. It is now expected that an agreement covering the details of the United States naval stations will be reached by President Palma and United States Minister Squiers within three weeks.

(Special by Scripps-Melroe.) Jackson, Ky., May 23.—Great anxiety felt here over the arrival of the troops ordered out by Gov. Beckham to see that the law is enforced in this town and if possible force the civil authorities to enforce it.

Fear Violence
The general opinion is that if Curtis Jett accused of the murder of attorney Marcus, is brought back to Jackson, lively times will follow and bloodshed will result, as Jett's friends are as a majority, lawless men.

Would Rescue
It is also said that an attempt will be made to rescue him and as his friends belong to the dominant faction it is probable that such a move might be as successfully carried out despite the presence of the troops.

SESSION CLOSED AT NOON TODAY

Forty-Sixth Annual Session of the State Legislature, Adjourned Sine Die.

NOTABLE SESSION

The Primary Bill Marks a New Epoch in Legislation for Wisconsin Politics.

(Special to The Gazette.) Madison, Wis., May 23.—The forty-sixth, regular session of the legislature, and the tenth biennial session, ended at noon today, with but a few members present for the final obsequies, though the attendance during the week has been larger than customary in the closing week, owing to the final contest on the primary election bill.

Houses Adjourn
Final reports were received from the governor of his action on bills shortly before the closing hour arrived, and at the stroke of noon Lieut. Gov. Davidson, in the senate and Speaker Leinroot in the assembly declared the session of 1903 adjourned sine die.

Notable Session
The session has been a notable one in many ways. The laws passed include some measures which constitute pioneer legislation, notably the primary election bill, which is more sweeping than anything of the kind thus far inaugurated in any state, but which must still secure the approval of the people before taking effect; the bill taxing railroads on the ad valorem basis, a system which operates in about a dozen other states, among them Illinois and Iowa; the start toward a constitutional amendment providing for a graduated income tax; taxation of credits, including mortgages on real estate, though this is to be done only when requested by the owner of the mortgaged premises. These are a few of the most important. But this legislature is also notable for the things it has not done, in the way of passing laws.

Bills Killed
Chief of the measures killed is the bill providing for the establishment of a state railway commission with authority to fix rates and following its defeat the bill prohibiting the railway companies from increasing present rates, which met a similar fate. These two bills brought the liveliest fight which has been put up by the railway companies in recent years, at least, and brought to their aid the manufacturers and shippers, to whose efforts the defeat of the bills is due, though it is not probable that the railway commission bill would have passed the upper house in any event.

UNION PACIFIC ADMITS ELEVATOR AGREEMENT

Concerns at Omaha, Council Bluffs and Kansas City are Paid for Handling Grain.

Washington, May 23.—The Union Pacific railroad has filed with the interstate commerce commission its answer to the order of the commission instituting an investigation of the alleged rebates of the Union Pacific to elevators.

The Union Pacific admits that it has an agreement with the Midland Elevator Company at Kansas City and the Omaha Elevator Company at Council Bluffs, both companies being representatives of Peavey & Co., under the terms of which the Union Pacific pays 1 1/2 cents per 100 pounds for receiving, transferring and handling all grain which passes through these elevators.

The Union Pacific says that these elevators are absolutely necessary to the economical and profitable handling of its grain business and that instead of building and operating the elevators it arranged with the representatives of the Peavey concern to construct and operate them and furnish the necessary facilities for handling all grain shipped over and consigned to the Union Pacific lines. The road denies that the allowance so paid is excessive.

ANOTHER LETTER FROM OBSERVER

SEES MANY HAPPENINGS ABOUT THE CITY.

HE STATES FACTS CLEARLY

Sees Things in a Light That Will Appeal to All Readers.

Not long ago, I read about the proceedings of some Third Ward people who wanted to improve their park and began operations by concluding not to wait for the city council. This was one of the best moves that I have happened to see for a long time and it ought to be taken as a hint by others, if in fact it is not a harbinger of the good times coming.

Why Not Take The Hint? Is the reader not in favor of the curfew bell? If so the remedy lies in having parents take care of their children and not wait until they become incorrigible. Scores of hundreds of children are permitted to roam the streets, no one knows where both day and night, and even more of them break the law and are caught. Then comes the appeal for the leniency of the court until the last of the reformatory opens, and the officers of the law are blamed for allowing these children to learn bad habits. What has the official to do with the habits of your boy or girl until they become law breakers?

Matter of Restraint Mostly How long must it take the intelligent citizen to learn that the laws designed to control the person are mostly in restraint? There is some complaint of rowdiness upon street corners in different parts of the city at night. The flaring street lamp instead of preventing these street scenes, appears to furnish a rendezvous for the boys, and the beauty of it is that each boy performs on some corner beside his own.

Do Schools Teach Street Manners? The ancient doctrine that the pedagogue controlled the pupil while the latter was on the highway, is no longer heard, but it wouldn't be so very bad provided the pedagogue was kept posted. When a gang of unruly break out of school and give forth sundry yells, that sound like Commanche Indians, and pummel each other with fists, and stones, the peaceful public, is apt to conclude that there is a screw loose somewhere. Rumors has it that the parent lays the blame on the school teacher, and that the latter places the blame upon the parent. It is often the case between this conflict of authority, the pupil finds nobody not even himself, for he is quite unable to say what he will do next. Just at present it is the flower, in a few weeks it will be the usual pluffer of fruit—that is to say, if previous plufferings have not already disgusted the fruit grower, so that he has destroyed his trees rather than endure the annual pest.

Speaking About Bridges A great many people seem to want somebody else to build another bridge between Court street and the Franklin street railway bridge. In former years agitation caused many reforms, nowadays the rule is to keep quiet, and wait for something to turn up. It is hard telling which is the better policy, but it doesn't take much sense to show, which of them gets the bridge first.

A Quiet Summer Coming The Observer notes that the people of Janesville have several reasons for spending a quiet summer in the city. They will not be annoyed with streets torn up, and heaps of mud and stone left on the sidewalks. It will take between three and four months, of official advertising and other real tape before the first trench can be dug for sewerage. By that time it is not improbable that the people may reject the plan and demand another system of engineering. Just now it is observed that a great many the looking equipments are taking the people around town to see what is going on.

Don't Be Too Particular But the worthy citizen and his family ought not to be too particular and above all, should be willing to accept a few remarks on caution. For instance, they will please drive with moderation over the bridges of they hear creaking noises below deck. They shouldn't drive too near those models of rustic engineering, erected by the enterprising Mr. Carlington to boom the Third Ward additions.

One Safe Place Although the famous stone crusher outfit no longer presents the appearance of having been raked with a gad, thing gun there are said to be sparks hidden in the old crickets, and it is not wise to go there. As to that matter, it might not be the popular thing now to imitate Diogenes with his lantern. There is, however, one spot where it is said to be safe to show the stranger most anytime, no matter what his proclivities or tastes. The city treasury is free from offering temptation, and unlike the bank of England, it doesn't have to be flooded with six or eight feet of water to protect the coin. After viewing those marble halls, and glistening stone casings, take a peep in to the court of justice and be satisfied. The wonder is that the bell in the tower knows enough to ring out the visitor and audible in his ear, with its softest silvery note, "kind sir, please cut your dandelions".

Curious Facts It is a curious fact that applications are being received for the location of new factories, and for the purchase of crushed stone for street uses. As the old price of 50 cents per yard is about 30 cents per yard less than the cost of production, it is evident that the crusher will not be repaired for speculative purposes. Again it is rumored that some people wonder why the streets are not being repaired. They are taxed to furnish printed lists of expenses, etc., and now it seems that they don't read the reports. The Common council has adopted a cast iron rule, not to order work done where there is no money to pay for it. It is a very simple rule.

At the St. Paul passenger depot, the trains between 10 and 12 o'clock now come in on the old plan. The train from Mineral Point comes in on track No. 2, which is the track next but one to the depot. Chas. E. Dougherty, an engineer on the Chicago & Northwestern railroad is about to move his family to either Fond du Lac or Sheboygan, he has not fully decided which city he will make his home. The many friends of the family will be sorry to have them leave the city.

George Road, Northwestern road carpenter has built a miniature bridge to span the little lake in the round-house park. The fountain is now surrounded with a wire fence, with posts painted green. Altogether, it makes a pretty effect.

The Rock Island has strong telephones, one wire between Harrington and Caldwell, Kan., and trains running between the two cities are installed with the telephones. Should trouble occur, the trainmen may quickly place themselves in communication with headquarters.

The gross earnings of all the railroads in the United States reporting for the first week of May are $1,000,000, an increase of slightly over 13 per cent over last year, and 29 per cent over the same period in 1901. The biggest gains were by the lines between Chicago and New York.

One of the first steps of the Pere Marquette road to provide for the increasing of business through the Chicago extension was an order for 5,000 new freight cars. It set aside money for them out of its new bonds.

The system of placing expert firemen on the trains of the Northern Pacific to teach the ordinary fireman has proven a great success and the consumption of coal is greatly lessened.

The Milwaukee road taxes in Minnesota for 1902 are scheduled at $272,477.91; those of the Northwestern road, $87,276.60, and those of the Wisconsin Central, $6,633.29.

Don't go too near the North Jackson street bridge, without taking along your most powerful smelling bottles. If people really have cause to cross the river, the safer way would be to drive out a few miles, and cross either at Afon or over at the four mile bridge, near Leyden. If, however, the simpler plan is possible, the people better not attempt to cross oftener than once or twice a year.

The wonder is that the bell in the tower knows enough to ring out the visitor and audible in his ear, with its softest silvery note, "kind sir, please cut your dandelions".

Curious Facts It is a curious fact that applications are being received for the location of new factories, and for the purchase of crushed stone for street uses. As the old price of 50 cents per yard is about 30 cents per yard less than the cost of production, it is evident that the crusher will not be repaired for speculative purposes. GOOD POEM BY HARRY HARVEY

He Writes on "The Reveries of a Poet," in a Most Pleasing Manner.

Harry Harvey, a 19 year old boy who formerly resided in Janesville, and who is a cousin to H. S. Ames, is acquiring quite a reputation as a poet. Below is his latest poem:

Reveries of a Poet They say I am a poet, And yet I know not why, No one has praised my writings Oh, will they when I die? I've talked about the brooklet, And the gentle sighing breeze, I've raved about all nature, And mankind tried to please, I've spoke of gallant lovers, As in knightly days of old, And still with all my talking, I'm sure I've gained no gold, I've praised the bright, soft moon-light, The waters clear and blue, And told some little secrets, Of what a bachelor ought to do, I've done as other poets, Who now have turned to clay; Whose poems and inspirations Made them famous in their day, Will they crown my head with laurels, When I am dead and gone? I know I'll prize these offerings, When six feet in the ground, Will they raise a marble shaft, Upon my lonely grave, And have my bust in burnished bronze, Like Burns and Lowell and Gray? But Oh, I now am sure of this, As the wind doth mournfully sigh That a poet is never famous Until the poet dies.

Decorated day bids fair to find the more ardent athletic enthusiasts of this city scattered in at least three different directions. There is the "Intercollegiate" at Madison, the Conference at Chicago, and the Wisconsin-Beloit baseball game in the Line City.

As always the interscholastic will take rank as the banner event of the year to which the high schools of the state are admitted. Every indication seems to point to as long a list of entries as ever in the past, while the sharps are prophesying more than the usual number of fractured records. More than one college is laying plans for replenishing its depleted athletic ranks on the basis of next Saturday's showing. More than one high school had will suffer from enlarged cranium before the coaches from larger schools, with their flattering inducements, are done with him.

The Conference Meet. Severe criticism is being meted out to the faculty committee on eligibility for accepting the entry list of Missouri university for the intercollegiate conference meet after shutting out Drake and welcoming Beloit. It is held that the meet should be either open or shut and that it is neither when such distinction is shown. Drake captured two firsts last year, and their amateur standing was unquestioned.

Coach Stagg has offered the following tabulation of estimates on the outcome of the meet:

100 yard dash—Michigan first, Chicago second, and Illinois third.
220 yard dash—Chicago first, Michigan second, and Illinois third.
Quarter mile—Wisconsin first, Minnesota second, and Chicago third.
Half mile—Chicago first, Wisconsin second, and Michigan third.
Mile—Wisconsin first, Michigan second, and Illinois third.

Two miles—Michigan first, Chicago second, and Wisconsin third.
Shot put—Illinois first, Wisconsin second, and Michigan third.
Pole vault—Chicago first, Michigan second, and Illinois third.

Hammer throw—Michigan first, Wisconsin second, and Chicago third.
Broad jump—No pick for first, Chicago second, and Michigan third.
High jump—Michigan first, Michigan second, and Chicago third.

High hurdles—Minnesota first, Chicago second, and Michigan third.
Low hurdles—Minnesota first, Chicago second, and Michigan third.

Discuss—No estimates.
This gives the following: Michigan, 37; Chicago, 34; Wisconsin, 20; Minnesota, 12; Illinois, 7; scattering, 15.

Stagg evidently counts on Brock, a man of Minnesota to cop both hurdles, Poole of Wisconsin to take the quarter mile, and Rothgerts of Illinois to win the shot put. The fact that he gives no points to Chicago in the mile and places the maroons in second for the two mile indicates that he will probably enter Hall against Kellogg in order to clinch three points in the long distance run.

Reliance Probably Fast.
That the valiant old Columbia will retire from business as a cup defender and that the Reliance will now take up the work of fending off the efforts of Sir Thomas Lipton to "lift" the cup is the conclusion reached by many who witnessed Thursday's trial race between the two. Crossing the line only a few lengths ahead of the old champion, the Reliance managed to increase that lead to almost two miles before the first mark was reached, widened the gap still more on the short run to the second mark, and finally swept to a finish with a good three miles of sound water washing itself between herself and the hard-driven Columbia.

Up to this trial the Reliance had come out second best in practically every test, and yet not one of the tests was counted as in anywise conclusive. From the first the lines of the new boat had been picked as superior, and capable of doing up the Columbia in any all-around race. The Constitution, the abandoned defender, was regarded as the "dark horse" of the trio.

Harvard-Yale Today
Wearers of the crimson and blue are battling on Yale field today and indications point to one of the closest fights ever participated in by these two universities. Indications favor Yale, because of its superior performances this spring but last year Yale was picked to win the meet and Harvard gave Yale an awful drubbing. This year the crimson team is not so strong.

"Billy" Shiek, Harvard's best sprinter will be entered in the two sprints. He will be pitted against Moulton, the westerner, and their race should be the prettiest of the meet. Capt. Lightner of Harvard will be entered in the two sprints also, and Moulton will have a hard time to beat the crimson captain.

The same big men will contest in the 220 yards dash. Along with them will be entered Louis Grik of Davenport, Ia., and Perkins, who will represent Harvard, while Lilley will carry Yale's colors with Moulton. Harvard men do not look to see Moulton get better than a third, as Capt. Lightner is running close to Schlie.

Should Harvard win, the under-graduates will be agreeable surprised, and should she lose she will enter the Mott Haven games a week from tomorrow with hopes of revenge.

The Mott Haven fight will be a glorious one, as Yale needs the victory this year to give her permanent possession of the big trophy. On the other hand, should Harvard win, she will be tied with Yale in the number of victories scored.

America-England Meet
In July next a return contest has been arranged to take place between the universities of Yale Harvard, U. S. A., and Oxford and Cambridge, England. Two of these matches have already been decided—the first in 1899, at Queen's Club, London, when Oxford and Cambridge won by five events to four; the second at Berkeley Oval, New York, in 1901, when the much more decisive victory of six events to three was gained by the American colleges. A considerable amount of interest has been excited over the third meeting of the leading universities of the two countries. Capt. Smith of Cambridge picks England to win four events and the United States three, with two very open contests.

Nearly all the summer gowns show a bit of hand work and fagoting is used on all sorts of materials from the heaviest to the sheerest kinds.

A black India silk waist with small tucks and black lace insertions can be purchased for only $3 and makes a serviceable and cool waist for summer wear.

Many of the embroidered robes seen in the shops have fancy mesh insets that give the desired transparent effects. These robes are of linen pongee or taffeta.

Stocks grow lovelier and more complicated every day and are sold at such moderate prices that unless one has plenty of time at her disposal, it hardly pays to make them.

Openwork silk or lace mitts are seen in the shops in black and white and come in elbow, shoulder and wrist lengths and it is said will be much worn with summer gowns this season.

Fans for graduation presents are shown in all kinds and styles from the plainest up to the loveliest that can well be imagined, and range in price all the way up from 50 cents to $50.

WISCONSIN WEATHER FORECAST

Threatening with thunderstorms tonight and Saturday.

ON THE DEFENSIVE
The boy who stood in the court room, his face flushed with embarrassment, gave every evidence of being guilty of the crime of which he was accused, but he was as innocent as a child.

He had loitered on the way home the evening before to watch a couple of boys who were climbing out of the back window of a store with pockets full of plunder, and, as they started to run when an officer surprised them, he ran with them, and when he stumbled and fell, he soon found himself in the hands of an official, with circumstances all against him.

The night had been spent in the lock-up and now he stood before the judge for examination. His story was simple and truthful, but the experience was new to him, and he realized for the first time what it meant to be on the defensive.

He was a stranger in the city, and his home was a boarding house. No relative or friend was at hand to vouch for his character, and when asked what he had to offer by way of defense, he said: "nothing but this little book, and the last letter from my mother."

The little book was a pocket testament, and the letter a loving message from the old home. It contained so much of love and confidence, that it appealed to the judge, and the memory carried him back to the days when he was struggling for a foothold in the same busy city, dependent upon his own exertions.

As he handed back the book and message he said to the boy, in kindly tone, "I don't believe you are guilty, my lad, you are on the defensive, and circumstances are against you, but I am going to believe you for your mother's sake," and then he dismissed him.

The defensive side of any proposition is the undesirable side. This fact is recognized by political parties where an effort is always made to be the aggressor in any contest.

The republican party in the state has been rent in twain during the past four years, and the conservative element has been placed on the defensive.

The national democratic party has been in the same condition, and results have been very similar. The aggressive side of any question appeals to the masses.

Many years ago a mob captured Salut Paul on his return to Jerusalem after a three year missionary journey abroad. He was not only innocent but was engaged in the highest order of service.

A Roman court protected him, but in spite of the best defense he could offer, he was held for years as a prisoner. His appeals to justice were unavailing.

City governments are weak because so many of them are nothing more or less than an apology, and reform never comes until an aggressive policy prompts its action. These conditions have been true of Janesville for many years, and would have existed indefinitely had not the people become aroused and started out on an aggressive campaign.

Wrong doing is frequently defended by good people, and sin and iniquity condoned because it is easier to defend than reform.

The sharpest contest in which humanity is engaged, is the individual contest that is waged in the human heart, and many people go down to defeat because they are always on the defensive. The will becomes weakened, and sensibilities blunted, until power of resistance is gone, and an easy victim is the result.

The forces of evil are ever on the aggressive, because they have nothing to defend. They are not only aggressive, but persistent, and tireless as well and they constitute a foe that is ever on the alert.

The young man comes in contact with them before he escapes from the sheltering influences of home, and the girl meets them before she is old enough to have an escort.

The first oath that is uttered causes a blush of shame, and the first lie that is told leaves a sting of remorse, but both and falsehoods follow each other in rapid succession, until the boy starts out for himself, when he finds that society does not tolerate frauds, and the business world deception, and necessity places him on the defensive, against an aggressive foe that already has him within his grasp.

The girl may deceive her mother, she may travel close to the border line of ruin, and maintain her place in the home, but when she gets away from its tender care, she soon discovers that she has invited suspicion and if she would regain her reputation and establish character she must be on the defensive, guarding both word and action, for both boy and girl if the battle against self had been aggressive from the first. The world is very matter of fact, and it has but little time for apologies or excuses.

Every young man and every young woman owe it to themselves to be self-confident and self-reliant, and nothing contributes so much to the development of these graces as a victory over self in aggressive warfare.

There is a certain kind of timidity that passes for modesty among young people, that is nothing more or less than weakness. The world is not slow in discovering this defect and it is always a serious hindrance to success.

The young man with clear eye and resolute face, stands in the gateway of life's opportunities, with no apology to offer. He commands attention because of independent, self assertive manliness. He has fought moral epics open handed and won. The saloon, and its environments never trouble him, he has no bad habits to conceal with, and is as free from deception as when helpless in babyhood.

If the task assigned demands endurance, he is equal to it. If it requires thoughtful and painstaking care, he does not hesitate. If it places him in the way of sharp temptation, he has no fear of results, for he has been an aggressive soldier with armor tested at every point.

The world is waiting for this class of self reliant young men. The boy who looks you steadily in the eye, and says "I will" rather than the modest lad, who says in the faltering voice, "I'll try."

Lack of confidence in personal ability is always an element of weakness. Sherman's march to the sea was an aggressive campaign, and when Grant captured Richmond, he was not on the defensive. The Spanish fleets at Manila and Santiago were demolished by the American navy in a forward movement, and when Colonel Roosevelt scaled San Juan hill, he was on the way to the white house, with no thought of his destination.

It is possible to hold a fort and repel invasion, but this kind of warfare seldom captures the enemy. So in the conflict against self and human weakness, while the fort may be held and the enemy repulsed, it is better to get out in the open and protect the citadel by conquering the invasion.

The victory is not always to the strong for the foe with which humanity contends in the moral conflict, is never lacking in strength. It all depends upon the leadership. The captain who is never lost in a battle is always in commission and victory is assured to the faintest heart that trusts Him, and with implicit confidence, obeys.

Interesting developments are coming to light in the postal investigation now in progress. The department appears to have been very loosely conducted for a number of years, and many irregularities date back to former administrations. It is safe to say that when Mr. Payne gets through with his work, that the service will be thoroughly renovated, and some of the heads of departments will be removed in spite of civil service protection.

Chicago has joined the list of manufacturers, business men, and non-union men, in organizing a non-union union. Its object is not antagonistic to organized labor, but to furnish employment and protection from intimidation and injury to men who are anxious to work. Many kind of industries are paralyzed on account of strike conditions, and many men who are not in sympathy are willing to work if they can be secured protection.

The governor signed the seventh mill school tax bill, under protest. He recommended early in the session that he schools be required to prepare a budget, same as all other departments of the state are required to do. His recommendation was sensible, and should have been adopted. The mill tax lacks the first elements of business sense.

With 2200 poll tax subjects and 2500 dogs it ought to be an easy matter to put $5,000 in the city treasury. The dog population may be estimated a little low, there are 26 in one down town block. If this is a fair average, there are more canines than tax payers.

The babies department at the home for dependent children in Sparta is said to be so crowded that this class of little waifs are consigned to poor houses. Instead of appropriating $150,000 to enlarge the capitol building, the legislature might better have provided a few thousand dollars for an extra cottage at the state home.

A cyclone has struck the Western Union Telephone company in Pennsylvania, and hundreds of miles of poles and wires are down. The Penn. Central railway company are back of the storm. Notice was served on the Telegraph company to remove their poles from the right of way. They declined to do, and the railway company lent a hand with an ax.

PRESS COMMENT

Superior Leader: The legislature has reduced the pay of its chaplains from $25 to $15 per week. Of course the legislature should know what it is worth to be prayed for, but judging from the work of the present legislature the money was purely and simply a waste.

Lucine Journal: When legislators can distinguish the difference between corporations possessing nothing but the privilege of doing business in an incorporated form there may be an advance made in methods of legislation.

Menasha Breeze: Now let us forsake the old gods and go forth into the world with our loins girded up with righteousness and seek that which is for unity, justice and the state and nation and cease setting one man or more faction above the party of the state. Let us be true republicans.

Green Bay Gazette: On the other hand, if the senate primary plan goes through, Governor La Follette will hardly be available as a candidate for a third term. Two terms have been the rule for years and with a primary law passed it can be said that he has accomplished as much as he could expect and should step aside for another.

Neenah Times: Grover Cleveland writes a worse list than Colonel Buck. That settles it. Grover "cannot be your president."

Eau Claire Telegram: Wisconsin's voters have about seventeen months yet in which to make up their minds whether or not they want primary elections.

Milwaukee Sentinel: It is generally understood that the deputy game wardens, oil and factory inspectors, and Mr. Haugen will commence the next campaign on Monday of next week.

La Crosse Chronicle: Perhaps Gov. La Follette does not aspire to a third term. The strenuous life he has led with two legislatures ought to be enough to satisfy the appetite of an ordinary man.

La Crosse Press: One of the odd results growing out of the factional fight in the republican party ranks is the fact that hardly a single bill passed by this legislature can be dominated strictly a party measure.

Willwaukee Wisconsin: No, it isn't the recollection of the Milwaukee girls that brings Prince Henry back, because Prince Henry is a married man; but it may be the importunities of the young fellows in his suite.

Milwaukee Free Press: If any county wants to pay bonuses for the killing of crows and hawks, the people of that county should be permitted to decide whether they should be taxed for that purpose. Governor La Follette's position is sound.

BELOIT WON BY SMALL MARGIN

Defeated Lawrence University in a Track Meet, by a Score of 77 to 75.

The annual track and field contest between Lawrence university and Beloit college was fought yesterday afternoon at Appleton and Beloit won by a total score of 77 to 75 points. The meet to a certain extent resolved itself into a duel between Roger Adams, the crack athlete of Lawrence university, and Knox, the star of the Beloit team, and in the struggle Knox won, scoring 19 points to 15 for Adams.

A soft track and a softer field conspired to take the speed out of the events, and no records were broken, but in the Adams and Knox race, Adams showed himself the master of Knox in the 120 yard hurdles, in which the latter ran unplaced, and in the pole vault, where Knox retired with a sprained ankle which may lay him up for some time.

Adams for Lawrence might have won the 100 yard dash, but fell at the gateway, and despite this handicap ran a close second to Knox in 1:10 1-5.

The spectacular event of the day was when Peterson of Lawrence came so strong in the last fifty yards of the two mile run that he lost by only six inches at the tape, with a certainty of winning if the route had been two yards longer.

MANUAL COURSE IN THE COUNTY

WANT TO TAKE UP WORK IN THE SCHOOLS.

HAVE ASKED FOR INSTRUCTOR

Desire To Introduce Simple Manual Training in District Schools, If Possible.

Application has been made to State Superintendent of Schools H. E. Cary for an instructor in manual training to conduct classes at the teachers' institute which is to be held in this city beginning the second or third week of July. This step has been taken in harmony with a growing movement in various parts of the state toward the introduction of manual training in the country schools. The manual training is not made such a study as is carried on in the high school of this city, for example, but simply exercises for the training of the hand and eye.

Movement Gaining Power
When the teachers of the state met in convention at Milwaukee last December the county superintendents were addressed by L. L. Summers of the Oshkosh normal school on the importance of simple manual training work in the country schools. In asking for a conductor in this branch for the institute in this city, it was suggested that Mr. Summers would be especially acceptable. Through his efforts in the past the movement has gained vogue in some counties, Jefferson county being a notable example.

Class of Work Done
Instead of buying costly machinery for the highest grade of wood and iron work, such as is carried on in the high school of this city, the purpose of those who are pushing the movement for manual training in the schools of this county is the introduction of the most simple exercises possible—basket weaving, rug making, apron embroidering, garment sewing, paper cutting, and above all the simple wood working known as the Shoy system.

Shoy Work Emphasized
Under the Shoy system a knife and a piece of sandpaper form the only tools required for much of the work. For example, a piece of pine wood is whittled into the form of a ruler, from that it is modified until it forms a paper cutter, and from that the next step brings it into a differently and slightly more elaborate article. The theory of the work is that it has a counteracting influence upon the superfluous nervous energy which the child possesses.

BLIND STUDENTS ARE TO DEBATE

"The War of the Roses" Is Enacted at the State School for the Blind.

Many laughing sallies about the War of the Roses were made when the debating societies of the Red Rose and the White Rose were organized at the institute for the blind, but no one dreamed of any actual disagreement. Discussion waxed so warm, however, over plans for an open contest to be held between picked members of the two societies that the whole matter was finally declared off. Later the contestants got together, and fixed upon next Friday as the date when the Red Rose and the White Rose will war on the declamatory platform.

Members from both societies, one of which is made up of the young ladies and the other of men from the school, will present declamations, the contest being open to the public upon payment of a small admission fee. Musical numbers will be interspersed. The contest will begin at eight o'clock.

The ordinance of the Southern Wisconsin Interurban company has not yet been presented to the council, but will be at the next meeting, after which an opportunity will probably be given the promoters of that line to argue in their own favor.

Girls on Probation: Three of the girls who were arrested some time ago on a charge of vagrancy were brought up in the municipal court this morning. Lighting Committee Met: The common council committee on lighting met representatives of the Janesville Electric company last evening, and discussed the merits of the new lights which have been installed in various parts of the city.

VERY SMALL TAX SALE THIS YEAR

ONLY 120 SALES MADE BY THE COUNTY TREASURER.

LESS WORK FOR CO. CLERK

Total Value of Land Disposed of for Delinquent Taxes, Slightly Over $1,200.

Not in many years has the tax sale in the county been so low as this year. County Treasurer Rice has just footed up the result of the sale which took place on Tuesday. One hundred and twenty sales were made when the list in past years has run up as high as five or six hundred. The total value this year was $1,245.23.

Few Bidders
Only about a dozen persons took part in the bidding, the heaviest bidders being W. H. Macloon of this city, S. S. Northrop of Clinton, and J. F. DeYarmond of Marengo, Ill.

In comparison with this year there were 134 last year, a number that was regarded at that time as unusually small.

Prosperity
This diminution in the size of the delinquent list is attributed to more thorough work on the part of those on whom the collection devolves, and also to more general conditions of prosperity. Formerly the work of tax redemption was one of the heaviest tasks falling upon the county clerk and the labors of that office are greatly lessened by the smaller tax sale.

Innocent Beauties

For two nights, the past week, the "Innocent Beauties" played to Beloit audiences. This is the way the Beloit Daily News told the story of the company which will hold the stage at the Myers Grand tonight.

The "Innocent Beauties" appeared to an audience of men at the opera house last night but there was nothing in the show that would not have been perfectly proper for anyone to see and hear. The company is the best burlesque and vaudeville organization that has visited Beloit at popular prices. Some of the acts being especially fine. Notable among them were the acrobats, the cornetist and vocalist, the two song and dance teams and the trio. The chorus as a whole was good though there were few individual singers of note. The costumes were of the best and altogether the performance was all that was claimed in the advance notice. It is a good clean show and deserves a full house.

Fear of Strike Causes Abandonment of Projects in the Building Line and Curtails Orders for Structural Material—Payments Are Less Prompt.

New York, May 23.—"Weather conditions and the labor situation are the dominant influences in the business world. Unseasonably high temperatures at many points, especially in the East, stimulated retail trade in wearing apparel and other summer merchandise to an unusual degree, but had a most unsatisfactory effect upon vegetation, which was promptly rejected in diminished orders for supplies, and in some cases there were cancellations. More conservatism was also shown at the interior, where agricultural progress met with check, and, while no serious injury to the great staple crops is yet reported, the delay to planting induces caution among dealers," according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade. Continuing, the report says:

Adverse Factors.
"On the whole there are fewer wage-earners voluntarily idle, yet the spirit of unrest has caused the abandonment of some new enterprises and postponement of others, which means less demand for structural materials and labor. Payments are also less prompt, time often being asked where formerly cash transactions for a slight discount were the rule. Aside from these two adverse factors the trade situation is favorable, and with average weather and industrial peace there is every prospect of continued prosperity throughout the country. Manufacturing plants are generally well occupied, especially in footwear, iron and steel.

Iron Market.
"Readjustment in prices of iron and steel continues, the market gradually assuming normal conditions. There is no evidence of diminished activity as yet, and in many cases prompt deliveries are urged, but as the increased capacity brings plants nearer their orders buyers are naturally less eager to place contracts. The fact that some concessions have been made in quotations tends to postpone business, prospective buyers for still more favorable terms.

Cotton Goods Higher.
"Advances of about 5 per cent in wide sheetings indicate that the cotton goods market is beginning to respond to the higher raw material. A still more encouraging sign is the greater interest displayed by purchasers. Warm weather stimulates activity in wash goods for quick delivery. Print cloths are firmer, and while there is no demand for regulars, odd goods are sought freely. Reduced output of worsteds has strengthened the tone, and the recent advanced prices for carpets have not prevented large transactions. There is no sign of reaction in the footwear industry. Leather is steady at recent advances.

"Failures are 191 in the United States, against 192 last year, and four in Canada, compared with twelve 2 year ago."

CAUSED A SENSATION.

Little Girl, in Sound Sleep, Walks the Street of Cincinnati Late in the Evening.

The sight of a nine-year-old girl in a trailing nightgown walking on Seventh street toward Vine, at Cincinnati, the other evening caused several people in the vicinity of Wagner's drug store to think that they had seen a ghost—for ghost-like the little one looked as she moved along, her eyes wide open, but with a vacant stare in them.

Pedestrians passed her by, some of them stopping to turn around and cast a glance of curiosity at the strange little visitor. The weather being warm, the little one did not suffer from cold, and so she kept her way from 12 East Seventh street until a lady, seeing more in the weird face than other casual passers-by, rushed across the sidewalk and swooped the child up into her arms.

It was Mrs. Kilsch, of McMicken avenue, that caught the child, and before the astonished people could understand what was being done, was kissing her, comforting her and telling her not to be scared.

Mrs. Kilsch had detected that the child was walking the streets in her sleep, and had been fast asleep when she saw her. With the instincts of a mother she knew what terrors might seize the little one when awakened in such singular surroundings as a street full of people, all open-eyed with wonderment, and forestalled the reaction by grabbing her and folding her to her bosom.

The child was little Alma Rockwell, daughter of Lieut. Ed. Rockwell, of the Fifth district station. For several nights she had been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Egan, at 12 East Eleventh street, and one evening her aunt went out after the little one had been put to bed. Mrs. Egan had locked the door inside with a snap-lock, and the child had forced the lock back and walked through the door into the hallway on the second floor in her nightgown, and while still fast asleep had come down the stairs and was near the drug store before intercepted.

BOGUS BEGGAR UNDONE.

Man with Bandaged Arm Makes an Error in Court and It Costs Him Ten Dollars.

It was a pitiful look for sympathy which Fred Teppan gave Justice Sabbath when he appeared in the Maxwell street police court at Chicago. The prisoner's left arm was wrapped in bandages and it hung in a sling. He had been arrested by Detectives Thieme and Keefe on suspicion of imposing on the generosity of Chicago citizens.

"I have reasons to believe that the man's arm is not fractured in two places as he claims," said Detective Thieme.

"And I say it is," declared Teppan. Justice Sabbath questioned the man closely, and while Teppan was busy talking to his honor Attorney Epstein managed to untie Teppan's bandages without the prisoner's knowledge. Soon the bandages were removed and the sling untied. The arm fell apparently helpless to Teppan's side. It seemed red and discolored, and apparently it had been injured.

Teppan would have been discharged, but he became excited while pleading his case, and, forgetting the two fractures in his arm, he began to pound the desk with the "helpless" hand. Then he discovered his mistake and declared he had nothing further to say.

The prisoner had tied the arm so securely that the blood had stopped. He had also used chemicals to aid him in the deception. A fine of ten dollars and costs was imposed.

Toten Talks.

It is an old story to hear of actors who keep an audience in convulsions of overmastering laughter while their own hearts are grieving over the death of loved ones. Grace George, wife of W. A. Brady, the theatrical manager, was forced to undergo the harrowing experience Thursday night. She was in New York, starring in "Pretty Peggy" the vehicle in which she achieved a personal triumph at the Myers Grand last March. Through the long performance, she sang, danced, and brought roars of laughter from the audience by her portrayal of the "impudent-faced Irish lass" while her only child two years old, was dying.

In the Third ward there lives a young lady who has abjured all puzzle department get-rich-quick schemes in the future. Not for her any of those two hundred dollar prizes for solving a brain twister as easy as A-B-C. She knows, for she gave the correct answer to one of them and in return has received her share of the prize money—a gaudy pin which she has the privilege of exchanging for five cents in she prefers for remuneration in cash.

Her bonanza was received from a Chicago publishing house which ran a large advertisement in one of the leading magazines. The trick was to place the requisite number of 7's in a given space. She worked it out, getting as answer 687, which she mailed to the company, claiming the $200 prize which was offered.

Almost by return mail came the reply.

"Your answer is correct. 3,919 others gave same answer. Your share of $200 is five cents. We enclose handsome pin which may be exchanged if desired for the small sum due you. Sincerely, etc."

Letter to Mr. M. E. Becker, Janesville, Wis.

Dear Sir: Lead and oil is no longer the paint to be prosperous with. As everybody knows, lead and oil chills or powders off in about three years—three years is its limit.

Painters are putting a little zinc in their lead to make it tough—it lasts a good three years with a little zinc.

But painters don't like the job of mixing zinc. It's a tedious job, and both being white, nobody knows when the mixing is thorough. It gets half mixed and the paint goes on, a streak of lead and a streak of zinc. That is not good work.

The mistake made is in trying to do by hand what is better done by machinery. Hand-work can't compete with machine work.

Devco Ready Paint is your paint. It works twice as long as lead and oil. This reduces the cost of keeping a house well painted to half.

Devco Paint can be found at J. P. Baker's.

Yours truly,

Paine's Celery Compound

The one Remedy that will really make you well.

Years ago when a great public demand arose for a remedy for nervous ailments as well as a reliable blood purifier, Dr. Edward E. Phelps, professor of Materia Medica and Medical Botany, of Dartmouth Medical college, gave to diseased and suffering men and women his great discovery, Paine's Celery Compound. The success of this wonderful prescription has been phenomenal. No other remedy known to medical science enjoys such a widespread reputation today.

In this month of May when so many are sick, Paine's Celery Compound makes people well. It is the only true specific prescribed by eminent practitioners for diseases arising from a debilitated nervous system; it is a positive cure for sleeplessness, wasting strength, rheumatism, neuralgia, dyspepsia, liver, and kidney troubles, and all blood diseases. Mr. J. H. Lewis of Denver, Colo., one of the most prominent life insurance men in the United States, writes as follows:

"After an attack of Grip, I found myself broken in nervous vigor, and with bowels and kidneys seriously deranged. As time brought no improvement, but rather an increased nervous prostration, I was induced to make use of Paine's Celery Compound for over a month, and myself with the same springy step and usual vigor as before my illness, the former lassitude and nervous disturbance having disappeared, and I am now with bowels and kidneys have been corrected."

CHAPTER I.

THE young man stood in the field road giving directions to a robust negro who was plowing the corn, which in parallel rows stretched on to the main road a quarter of a mile distant. It was a beautiful day. The sun was shining brightly, but the atmosphere had dropped a dim veil over the nearby mountain. Even the two storied farmhouse, with its veranda and white columns, to which the field road led up a gradual slope, showed only its outlines. However, Alan Bishop, as he strolled his gaze upon the house, saw the figure of an elderly woman come out of the gate and with a quick step hurry down to him. It was his mother. She was tall and angular and had high cheek bones and small blue eyes. She had rather thin gray hair, which was wound into a knot behind her head, and over it she wore only a small red breakfast shawl, which she held in place by one of her long hands.

"Alan," she said, panting from her brisk walk, "I want you to come to the house right off. Mr. Trabue has come to see you pa again, and I can't do a thing with 'im."

"Well, what does he want with him?" asked the young man. His glance was on the plowman and his horse. They had turned the far end of the corn row and were coming back, only the nodding head of the animal being visible beyond a little rise.

"He's come to draw up the papers for another land trade yore pa's makin'. He's the lawyer fer the Tompkins high and had a screen made of a decorated window shade tightly pasted on a wooden frame. Old man Bishop sat near a window and through his steel framed nose glasses was carefully reading a long document, written on legal cap paper. He paid no attention to the entrance of his son, but the lawyer, a short, fat man of sixty-five with thick black hair that fell below his coat collar, rose and extended his hand.

"How's Alan?" he asked pleasantly. "I saw you down in the field as I come along, but I couldn't catch your eye. You see, I'm out after some of your dad's cash. He's buying hisself rich. My Lord, if it ever does turn his way he'll scoop in enough money to set you and your sister up for life! Folks tell me he owns mighty near every stick of timber land in the Cohutta valley, and what he has he got at the bottom figure."

"If it ever turns his way," said Alan, "but do you see any prospect of its ever doing so, Mr. Trabue?"

The lawyer shrugged his shoulders. "I never let on another man's trick, my boy, and I never throw cold water on the plans of a speculator. I used to when I was about your age, but I saw so many of 'em get rich by paying no attention to me that I quit right off. A man ought to be allowed to use his own judgment."

Old Bishop was evidently not hearing a word of this conversation, being wholly absorbed in studying the details of the deed before him. "I reckon it's all right," he finally said. "You say the Tompkins children are all of age?"

"Yes, Elsie was the youngest," answered Trabue, "and she stepped over the line last Tuesday. There's her signature in black and white. The deed's all right. I don't draw up any other sort."

Alan went to his father and leaned over him. "Father," he said softly and yet with firmness, "I wish you'd not get hastily in this deal. You ought to consider mother's wishes, and she is nearly distracted over it."

Bishop was angry. His massive, clean shaven face was red. "I'd like to know what I'd consult her fer," he said. "In a matter of this kind a woman's about as responsible as a sucklin' baby."

Trabue laughed heartily. "Well, I reckon it's a good thing your wife didn't hear that or she'd show you whether she was responsible or not. I couldn't have got the first word of that off my tongue before my wife would 'a' knocked me clean through that wall."

Alfred Bishop seemed not to care for levity during business hours, for he greeted this remark only with a frown. He scanned the paper again and said, "Well, of that's any flaw in this I reckon you'll make it right."

"Oh, yes, I'll make any mistake of mine good," returned Trabue. "The paper's all right."

"You see," said Alan to the lawyer, "mother and I think father has already more of this sort of property than he can carry, and"—

"I wish you and yore mother 'd let my business alone," broke in Bishop, firing up again. "Trabue heer knows I've been worryin' 'im fer the last two months to get the property in salable shape. Do you reckon after he gets it that way I want to listen to yore two tongues a-waggin' in open opposition to it?"

Trabue rubbed his hands together. "It really don't make a bit of difference to me, Alan, one way or the other," he said pettily. "I'm only acting as attorney for the Tompkins estate and get my fee whether there's a transfer or not. That's where I stand in the matter."

"But it's not what I stand in, Mr. Trabue," said a firm voice in the doorway. It was Mrs. Bishop, her blue eyes flashing, her face pale and rigid. "I think I've got a right—and a big one—to have a say so in this kind of a trade. A woman 'at's stayed by a man's side for thirty odd year an' raked an' scraped to help save a little handfull of property for her two children has got a right to raise a rumpus when her husband goes crooked like Alfred has an' starts in to bankrupt 'em all just for a blind notion of his'n."

"Oh, that you are!" said Bishop, lifting his eyes from the paper and glaring at her over his glasses. "I knowed I'd have to have a knockdown an' drag out fight with you 'fore I signed my name, so I an' gitt it over. Trabue's got to ride back to town."

"But what in the name of common sense is the money to come from?" the woman hurled at her husband as she rested one of her bony hands on the edge of the table and glared at him. "As I understand it, that's about 5,000 acres in this place alone, an' yore a-payin' a dollar a acre. What's it a-come from, I'd like to know? What's it to come from?"

Bishop sniffed and ran a steady hand over his short, gray hair. "You see how little she knows of my business," he said to the lawyer. "Heer she's raisin' the devil an' Tom Walker about the trade, an' she don't so much as know what the money's to come from."

"How was I to know?" retorted the woman, "when you've been tellin' me fer the last six months that thar wasn't enough in the bank to give the house a coat of fresh paint an' patch the barn roof."

"You knowed I had $5,000 wuth o' stock in the Shoal River cotton mills, didn't you?" asked Bishop defiantly and yet with the manner of a man throwing a missile which he hoped would fall lightly.

"Yes, I knowed that, but"—The woman's eyes were two small fires burning hungrily for information beyond their reach.

"Well, it happens that Shoal stock is jest the same on the market as ready money, up a little today an' down to-morrow, but never varyin' more'n a fraction of a cent on the dollar, an' so the Tompkins heirs say they'd jest as lieve have it, an' as I'm itchin' to relieve them of their land it didn't take us long to come together."

If he had struck the woman squarely in the face, she could not have shown more surprise. She became white to the lips and with a low cry turned to her son. "Oh, Alan, don't—don't let 'im do it. It's all we have left that we can depend on! It will ruin us!"

"Why, father, surely," protested Alan as he put his arm around his mother, "surely you can't mean to let go your mill investment which is paying 15 per cent to put the money into lands that may never advance in value and always be a dead weight on your hands! Think of the loss of interest and the taxes to be kept up. Father, you must listen to me!"

"Listen to nothin'," thundered Bishop, half rising from his chair. "No-body axed you two to put in. It's my business, an' I'm a-goin' to attend to it. I believe I'm doin' the right thing, an' that settles it."

"The right thing," moaned the old woman as she sank into a chair and covered her face with her hands. "Mr. Trabue," she went on fiercely, "when that factory stock leaves our hands we won't have a single thing to our names that will bring in a cent of income. You kin see how bad it is on a woman who has worked as hard to do fer her children as I have. Mr. Bishop always said Adele, who is visitin' her uncle's family in Atlanta, should have that stock for a weddin' gift of she ever married, an' Alan was to have the lower half of this farm. Now, what would we have to give the girl—nothin'! but thousands of acres o' hills, mountains an' gulches full o' bear, wildcats an' catamounts—land that I'd break any young couple to hold on to, much less put to any use. Oh, I feel perfectly sick over it!"

There was a heavy, dragging step in the hall, and a long, lank man of sixty or sixty-five years of age paused in the doorway. He had no beard except a tuft of gray hair on his chin, and his teeth, being few and far between, gave to his cheeks a hollow appearance. He was Abner Daniel, Mrs. Bishop's bachelor brother, who lived in the family.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, shifting a big quid of tobacco from one cheek to the other. "Piotin' agin the whites? Ef you are, I'll decamp, as the feller said when the bull feeder 'buted 'im in the small of the back. How are you, Mr. Trabue? Have they run you out o' town fer some of yore legal rascality?"

"I reckon your sister thinks it's rascality that's brought me out today," laughed the lawyer. "We are on a little land deal."

"Oh, well, I'll move on," said Abner Daniel. "I jest wanted to tell Alan that Riggs' boys got into his young corn in the bottom jest now an' rooted up about as many acres as Pole Baker's plowed all day. Ef they'd a-rooted in straight rows an' not gone too high the stalks, they nought 'a' done the crop more good than harm, but the'n aim or intention, one or 'other, was bad. Folks is that away. Mighty few of 'em root—when they root at all—fer anybody but the 'em'selves. Well, I'll git along to my room."

"Don't go, Brother Abner," pleaded his sister. "I want you to help me stand up fer my rights. Alfred is about to swap our cotton mill stock for some more wild mountain land."

In spite of his natural tendency to turn everything into a jest—even the serious things of life—the hollow face of the tall man lengthened. He stared into the faces around him for a moment; then a slow twinkle dawned in his eyes.

"I've never been known to take sides in any communal tussle yet," he said to Trabue in a dry tone. "Alf may not know what he's about right now, but he's Solomon hisself compared to a feller that will undertake to settle a dispute betwixt a man an' his wife—more especially the wife. Gese whilkins! I never shall forget the time old Jane Hardaway come heer to spend a week an' Alf thar an' Betsy split over buyin' a hatrack fer the hall. Betsy had seed one over at Mason's at the emporium an' determined she'd have one. Maybe you noticed that fancy contraption in the hall as you come in. Well, Alf seed a nigger unloahin' it from a wagon at the door one mornin', an' when Betsy, in fear an' trembling, told 'im what it was fer he mighty nigh had a fit. He said his folks never had been above hangin' their coats an' hats on good, stout nails an' pegs, an' as fer them umbrella pans to catch the drip, he said they was fancy spixboxes, an' wanted to know ef she expected a body to do the'r chavin' an' smokin' in that windy hall. He said it jest should not stand that with all them prongs an' arms to attack unwary folks in the dark, an' he toted it out to the buggy shed. That got Betsy's dander up, an' she put it back agin the wall an' said it 'ud stay thar of she had to stand behind it an' hold it in place. Alf wasn't done yet. He 'lowed ef they was to have such a purty trick as that on the hill it had to stay in the best room in the house, so he put it heer in the parlor by the piano. But Betsy took it back two or three times, an' he hant that he was a-doin' a sight o' work fer nothin' an' finally quit totin' it about."

It must be apparent to every one that qualities of the highest order are necessary to enable the best of the products of modern commerce to attain permanently to universal acceptance. However loudly heralded, they may not hope for world-wide preference unless they meet with the general approval, not of individuals only, but of the many who have the happy faculty of selecting, enjoying and learning the real worth of the choicest products. Their commendation, consequently, becomes important to others, since to meet the requirements of the well informed of all countries the method of manufacture must be of the most perfect order and the combination the most excellent of its kind. The above is true not of food products only, but is especially applicable to medicinal agents and after nearly a quarter of a century of growth and general use the excellent remedy, Syrup of Figs, is everywhere accepted, throughout the world, as the best of family laxatives. Its quality is due not only to the excellence of the combination of the laxative and carminative principles of plants known to act most beneficially on the system and presented in the form of a pleasant and refreshing liquid, but also to the method of manufacture of the California Fig Syrup Co., which ensures that uniformity and purity essential in a remedy intended for family use. Ask any physician who is well informed and he will answer at once that it is an excellent laxative. If at all eminent in his profession and has made a special study of laxatives and their effects upon the system he will tell you that it is the best of family laxatives, because it is simple and wholesome and cleanses and sweetens the system effectually, when a laxative is needed, without any unpleasant after-effects. Every well-informed druggist of reputable standing knows that Syrup of Figs is an excellent laxative and you that it is the best, at the regular price of fifty cents per bottle, because it gives general satisfaction, but one should remember that in order to get the beneficial effects of Syrup of Figs it is necessary to buy the genuine, which is sold in original packages only; the name of the remedy—Syrup of Figs and also the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of each package.

It was due to Mr. Wilson and the attractive setting which he has given his this year's vehicle that such a triumph was achieved. The remainder of the company belonged to that category of actor people who are neither good enough nor bad enough to attract any considerable attention. Miss Bloodgood, as the burgher's daughter, might stand as exception to this general statement. Her comedy was of a kind to excite tears of laughter, whether it also won admiration or not.

Al Wilson, himself, was the "whole thing." At least half a dozen songs were introduced to give him opportunity to display his mellow cello-like tones, and they were what the audience wanted. There were a few people who are so old fashioned as to believe the words of equal importance with the melody, and to tell what he was singing about. Most of the house took it on faith that Wilson knew and were satisfied to let it rest there.

In the role of "The Prince of Tatters," Mr. Wilson has one of the most congenial parts he has ever filled. His highly polished accent, his mock-thrift, and his handsome presence fit him well for the part. In the Spinning Song he appeared to perhaps better advantage than any other of his lyrics, and it is safe to say that the graceful melody of the song will run in the heads of most of his auditors for several days to come.

FIVE PERSONS DIE IN CRASH

Man is Held Prisoner for an Hour Under Mass of Timber and Twisted Iron, Before Rescuers Succeed in Releasing Him.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 23.—Five persons were killed and twelve injured in an elevator accident here. The car contained seventeen passengers and it dropped six floors.

The accident happened in the Pennsylvania Electro-Mechanical Institute, where a ball was in progress, and is attributed to the vehicle being overloaded or in the hands of a green operator.

Supt. of Police John P. McTigue ordered the arrest of Prof. L. N. Giles, a mechanical engineer and instructor of the institute, who at the time of the accident was running the elevator.

The dead: Mamie Courtney, Kathryn Curtin, Susie Flanagan, unidentified man, unidentified woman.

The injured: Kate Flanagan, Albert Myers, Frank Hercock, Mrs. Lulu Postlewaite, Harry Lipson.

The above mentioned were the most seriously hurt, and were taken to hospitals by police ambulances. The others, it is believed, were not dangerously injured.

Car is Overloaded.

The institute occupies the fifth and sixth floors of the building at 1025 Fifth avenue and the employees and students had cleared the floors and sent out a large number of invitations for a ball. There probably were 700 persons in the hall at 10 o'clock, when the elevator started from the first floor loaded with seventeen passengers. The fifth floor was devoted to dancing, while the sixth was arranged for a dining and cloak room. The guests were first taken to the sixth floor.

Just as the elevator reached that floor there was a crash and it fell to the bottom. Not one of the seventeen occupants escaped injury. Two of the heavy weights fell on the victims after the elevator had reached the bottom. Each of them weighed a ton. The dead were crushed into unrecognizable masses.

Pinioned in Wreck.

The car smashed through the floor above the cellar of the building and was stopped by a brace post of wood three feet below the first floor. In this inaccessible position the passengers were jammed under broken timbers and twisted steel. Albert Myers was held a prisoner for more than an hour. While firemen and volunteer rescuers were preparing rigging to lift the machine so as to be accessible, he lay pinioned under the wreckage. Whisky and water were passed to him with words of encouragement.

HORTICULTURE

Effect of Stock on Scion.

For many years a fierce controversy has been going on as to the effect of stock on scion. It has generally been assumed that the thing grafted on another would retain all the characteristics it had when a seedling. Facts now point strongly the other way, and evidence is accumulating in favor of the very decided influence of the stock on the product of the scion. Not long ago a congress of French horticulturists took up and discussed the matter. The work of 67 experimenters was reviewed. One man had grafted La France, a very double rose, on a Panchée d'Orleans, a semi-double rose. As a result the roses grown on the grafted branch were semi-double, like those on the other branches of the stock. The same man grafted a large red tomato on an egg-plant having long violet fruits. The resulting tomatoes changed their shape entirely, and took on an elongated form like that of the egg-plant fruit. A round pear was grafted on a spindle-shaped pear, and the resulting fruit was spindle-shaped. Some of the experimenters claimed to have produced entirely new fruits by grafting. A Syphire-rose budded on Homere gave stems with fewer thorns than either parent, leaves intermediate in size and blooms intermediate in size and color. Like results were obtained with other varieties of roses. Belgian kidney beans were modified in flavor by growing on a French variety. The foxy taste of American grapes has been eliminated by grafting on vines not showing this characteristic. One savant claimed that new varieties could be produced by grafting and that these can be fixed in their characteristics and propagated true to kind. Two potatoes were grafted together and produced a variety known as Edouard Lefort. It reproduces itself true to kind. A tender sort of Kohlrabi was grafted on a hardy form of cabbage and produced a forage cabbage. This proved very hardy, and was midway in form between the two. These characteristics were transmitted through the seed and became permanent thereafter from seed. In spite of these examples, however, the opinion of the congress seemed to be that hybridization of this class is not very common, though it does occur. As a general thing also the forms thus obtained are not often constant in character. It appears certain that the acceptance of the idea of the greater influence of stock on scions, enormously increases the problems connected with the propagation of our known varieties.

For Exhibition Fruit.

Prof. F. W. Taylor, chief of the department of horticulture, at the coming world's fair at St. Louis, sends out the following advice regarding the growing and preparation of fruit for exhibition at that exposition: It is important that fruit growers everywhere begin at once to prepare to grow fruit for exhibit purposes. Sufficient plant food should be supplied to enable the trees to bear perfect specimens and this should be followed throughout the season with the most thorough cultivation. Thorough cultivation will hold the moisture in the soil which will be available for the use of the trees and plants in development of perfect specimens of fruits. The thinning of fruit should not be neglected. This is an important consideration where it is desired to grow perfect specimens. In doing this work it is advisable to leave only such specimens as promise to be large and perfect and also those that are not shaded by foliage. States that are planning to exhibit must have a sufficient quantity of fruit in cold storage, so that the space allotted to them will be entirely covered at the time of the opening of the exposition, and in order that they may have a sufficient quantity in reserve in storage to keep the space covered until the 1904 crop of fruit is available.

A circular on cold storage of fruits will be sent out from the department of horticulture in good season giving the latest information obtainable concerning that subject.

The Leaf Crumpler.

This insect infests apple, plum, cherry, peach and quince. It attacks the leaves and terminal buds, and when these fall, it eats away the tender bark and growing twigs. It reaches its growth from the middle to the last of May, when it is half an inch long and entirely green. In June it changes into a grayish moth. Egg-laying begins at once and in about a week the little brown caterpillars begin to appear and to feed upon the younger leaves. They begin to make tubes for themselves out of crumpled leaves and debris, and in the fall these are found hanging to the trees. A cheap and effective remedy is the spraying of the trees in the early spring just as the young leaves appear and before the blossoms open. Experiment has shown that a single spray of Paris green and lime (one pound of each to 150 gallons of water) applied at this season may destroy practically all leaf crumplers in time to prevent noticeable damage by them. In the fall and winter, the crumpled leaves should be picked from the bare trees.

New Extradition Law.
